PAYMENT TERMS

IMPORTANT INFORMATIONBooking Terms and Conditions:

The present booking is regulated by the Booking Terms and Conditions. Passengers acknowledge that they have received a copy, read and accepted the Booking Terms and Conditions before confirming their booking. A copy of the Standard Booking Terms and Conditions is also available on our website www.msccruises.co.uk Changes and cancellations are subject to penalties according to the Booking Terms and Conditions.

Bank Pre-Authorisations

During your cruise, if you've registered a credit or debit card for onboard expenses, you may see pre-authorisations on your statement. These pre-authorisations are a precautionary measure to reserve funds for potential expenses during your cruise. They are not actual charges but may temporarily reduce your available credit.

Normally, pre-authorisations are released after your final bill is settled upon disembarkation. However, in some cases, they might persist on your account beyond that point. While they should expire within 30 days after disembarkation, this time frame can vary based on your bank's policy. It is important to note that MSC Cruises does not have control over the duration of these holds and is not responsible for their release. Your bank is responsible for the release of any pending pre-authorisations.

Should you have any concerns or notice delays in the release of these holds, we recommend contacting your bank directly.

Bank Pre-Authorisations

During your cruise, if you've registered a credit or debit card for onboard expenses, you may see pre-authorisations on your statement. These pre-authorisations are a precautionary measure to reserve funds for potential expenses during your cruise. They are not actual charges but may temporarily reduce your available credit.

Normally, pre-authorisations are released after your final bill is settled upon disembarkation. However, in some cases, they might persist on your account beyond that point. While they should expire within 30 days after disembarkation, this time frame can vary based on your bank's policy. It is important to note that MSC Cruises does not have control over the duration of these holds and is not responsible for their release. Your bank is responsible for the release of any pending pre-authorisations.

Should you have any concerns or notice delays in the release of these holds, we recommend contacting your bank directly.
